Nominee's statement
My motivation to be FIG Vice President:	Having served the International Federation of Surveyors (FIG) in various capacities since 2002, and currently as Vice President, I have developed a deep understanding of FIG's vision, mission, and organizational structure. My long-term involvement has allowed me to appreciate the significance of maintaining close collaboration with member associations, national mapping agencies, academic institutions, corporate and affiliate members, as well as international partners such as the United Nations, UN-Habitat, UN-GGIM, World Bank, FAO, IAG, ISPRS, INTERGO, and CLGE. My experience as a Director of the FIG Foundation further strengthened my conviction of the importance of supporting developing countries and empowering young surveyors through education, training, and research. These initiatives are essential for building capacity and ensuring equitable progress within the global surveying community. My motivation to continue serving as FIG Vice President lies in the desire to assist the President in fulfilling FIG's strategic objectives, driving continuous improvement, and delivering greater value to members through the advancement of a sustainable professional framework. Senior members have a moral duty to share their knowledge and guide the next generation—an undertaking that I hold close to heart. Nurturing young professionals, planting the seeds of knowledge, and watching them grow into future leaders remain my greatest passion. Surveyors play an irreplaceable role in shaping societies. By working hand in hand with FIG members and international partners, we can achieve our common goals—unity, vision, and professional excellence. The role of FIG Vice President encompasses steering the technical Commissions, overseeing financial and administrative matters, mentoring young surveyors, supporting the organization of the Working Weeks and Congress, and strengthening partnerships across the global surveying community. Through these collective efforts, I am dedicated to advancing FIG's mission and contributing to a vibrant, sustainable future for the profession.

What I can offer in support of FIG's aims and objectives:	With a proven record of leadership and extensive experience in the surveying profession across both the public sector and professional institutes in Hong Kong, as well as through active participation in various FIG activities internationally, I am well positioned to contribute to the continued success of FIG. My long-standing involvement with professional bodies and non-governmental organizations has given me a deep understanding of the challenges, constraints, and opportunities they encounter. Through these experiences, I have witnessed firsthand how effective leadership, collaboration, and vision can generate meaningful progress and positive outcomes for the profession. These experiences have equipped me with the knowledge, perspective, and determination to support FIG in fulfilling its vision and mission as the leading international, non-governmental organization representing the global surveying community, recognized by the United Nations and its agencies. I am committed to contributing my expertise and leadership to strengthen FIG's role in promoting professional excellence, innovation, and sustainability worldwide.
My key skills for the Vice Presidency and FIG Council:	My professional strengths span across leadership, public administration, finance management, human resources management, mentoring, and training—skills that enable me to effectively serve FIG, its members, and the broader surveying community. I am deeply committed to teamwork, volunteerism, and fostering collaboration among professionals across different regions and disciplines. Strong interpersonal and communication abilities, grounded in extensive professional knowledge, allow me to engage constructively with colleagues and stakeholders at all levels. In addition, my proficiency in English, Chinese, and Putonghua provides a distinct advantage in promoting FIG's mission and facilitating closer connections among member associations across diverse linguistic and cultural contexts.
Any other supporting information:	Beyond my professional and organizational roles, I am deeply committed to advancing surveying education and knowledge dissemination. As an Adjunct Professor at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, I teach Geospatial Science

	and Technology for Smart City to undergraduate and postgraduate students. Through this academic engagement, I have the privilege of nurturing the next generation of geospatial professionals and instilling in them a deeper understanding of how spatial data and modern technologies can support sustainable urban development. This role allows me to bridge academic theory with professional practice, aligning educational outcomes with real-world needs in land administration, spatial data infrastructure, and smart city planning. By mentoring young talents and encouraging innovation-driven learning, I help cultivate a pipeline of capable professionals who will carry forward the values and vision shared by FIG. My involvement in higher education also extends FIG's influence within academia and strengthens collaboration between professional institutions and universities. This experience reinforces my belief that education, capacity building, and technological innovation are key cornerstones for the continued development of the global surveying community. As Vice President, I will continue to promote knowledge exchange, support young surveyors, and encourage academic-industry partnerships that contribute to FIG's mission of building a smarter, more sustainable, and inclusive world through geospatial excellence.
