Key words: Land management

SUMMARY

The reform of farmland property rights is the key link and important promoter of rural governance and rejuvenation. The 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China pointed out: "The reform of the rural land system must adhere to the "three bottom lines" and implement the "separation of powers". This is the historical mission given to the rural areas of "innovation, coordination, greenness, openness and sharing" after China's social and economic development has entered a new era. Cultivated land protection is a basic national policy that China must stick to for a long period of time, which is related to national food security, ecological security and social stability. However, the new era has new requirements for the protection of cultivated land. We should adopt new ideas and new methods in tackling the emerging problems in current rural development and governance. The reform of agricultural land property rights must conform to the trend of the new era.
