

Healing Country by Bridging the Digital Divide: The Power of Indigenous Mapping

Kass Boladeras (Australia)

SUMMARY

Country is sick, and Indigenous communities are facing a dual crisis—environmental devastation and a digital divide that limits access to the geospatial tools needed for land management. But when traditional knowledge meets technology, the opportunities for healing Country and strengthening communities are endless.

Explore how Mob-led mapping is transforming land management, cultural preservation, and environmental protection. Through the Indigenous Mapping Workshop, First Nations people are harnessing cutting-edge geospatial technology to map their land, tell their stories, and reclaim data sovereignty.
